

Current State of G7 Members

Since its creation, the G7 is losing the clout they once held. How can the largest world economies save the global trade? View our infographic using Global Trade Atlas intelligence on the G7 members.

Top exporters, 2000 - 2017 (*G7 members)

The policy-making clout of the G7 has eroded as the cumulative weight of their economic power has declined. In 2000, G7 countries were seven of the world's top eight exporters. In 2017, that number had dropped to only four out of eight.

Top exporter in 2000

-  US
$780.4 billion*
-  Germany
$549.9 billion*
-  Japan
$479.1 billion*
-  France
$326.5 billion*
-  UK
$284.4 billion*
-  Canada
$278.3 billion*
-  China
$249.2 billion
-  Italy
$239.7 billion*

Top exporter in 2017

-  China
$2.3 trillion
-  US
$1.5 trillion*
-  Germany
$1.45 trillion*
-  Japan
$698.3 billion*
-  Netherlands
$652.5 billion
-  South Korea
$573.7 billion
-  Hong Kong
$550.3 billion
-  France
$535.2 billion*

(Source: GTA)

China vs G7 member export

The disrupting force in the global economy remains China, which this century has become the greatest trading power the world has ever seen. It has easily outpaced every G7 country.

- | | |
|--|--|
|  Chinese exports
2000: $249.2 billion
2017: $2.3 trillion |  Italian exports
2000: $239.7 billion
2017: $506.5 billion |
|  US exports
2000: $780.4 billion
2017: $1.5 trillion |  French exports
2000: $326.6 billion
2017: $535.2 billion |
|  German exports
2000: $549.9 billion
2017: $1.4 trillion |  Canadian exports
2000: $278 billion
2017: $421 billion |
|  Japanese exports
2000: $479.1 billion
2017: $698.3 billion |  UK exports
2000: $284.3 billion
2017: $443.9 billion |

(Source: GTA)

Total global GDP from G7 members

since creation, down from around

75%

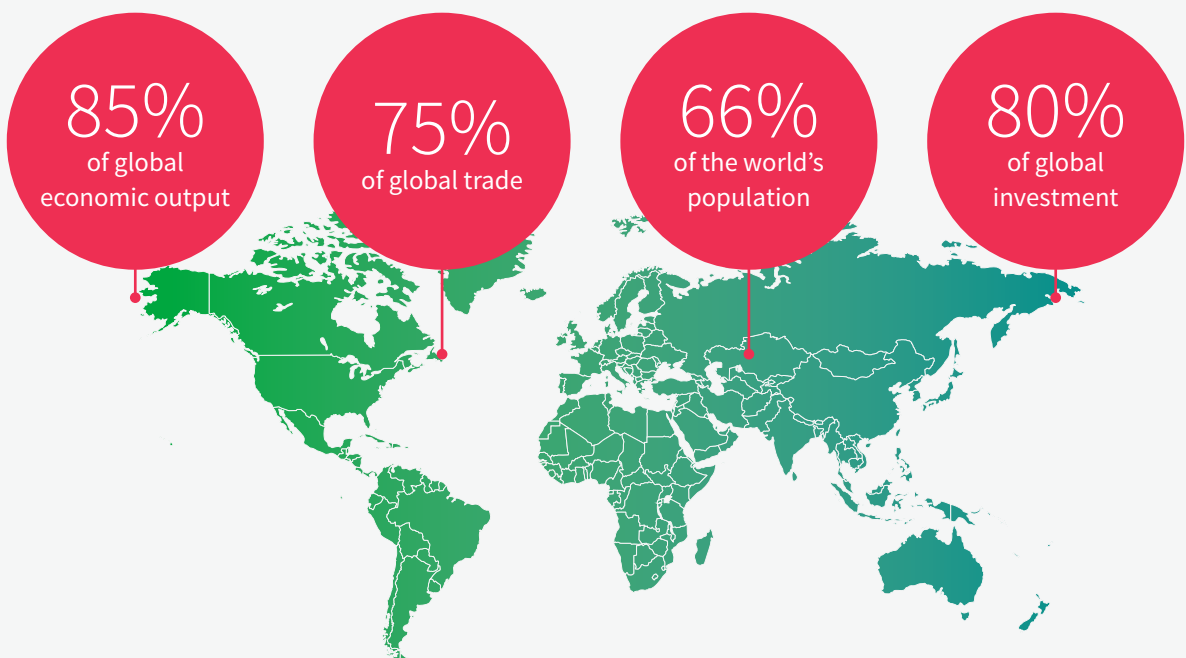

1973

2018

(Source: GTA)

New model of global economic governance is emerging – G20

G20, a group of the world's top 20 economies which includes China and doesn't require being a democracy.

Click here to read the full article of Why the G7 Can't Save Global Trade.

Contact us

Training training.requests@ihsmarkit.com | Customer care CustomerCare@ihsmarkit.com